FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1863.

TORIES GOING NORTH.

Although we place very little confidence in mere newspaper statements of official reports concerning the Oriental revolution, there can be no doubt that Flores has raised the siege of Montevideo, and that all hopes of seeing the "liberator" overturn President Berro's Government have vanished at least for the present year. If we had had any more serious stake, than $5 dollars, at issue, we should have felt almost at the proximity of Flores to the town, for in truth we expected every moment to hear that he had knocked down one of the ginger-bread barricades and marched into the Plaza. Fortune was playing with him, and never did such an opportunity present itself to a political desperado, for gaining his point by a bold stroke. He had cut off Moreno's troops, the only defence of the capital, and left the ground army of Montevideo and its fugues behind him: he knew that his party within the walls was very numerous, that discontent and dread pervaded all classes, and that no hope remained for the Government but to bribe down Medina's force by water, for Flores could put up a strong a position in the suburbs that nothing short of a European army could cut its way through.

But, happily the damning vice of this country, procrastination, did more injury to his cause than could the 12,000 loyal defenders of the Constitution. The gaucho adventurers passed day after day in sight of the ungarrisoned city, yet the ir leader, who had braved so many dangers and performed such Napoleonic exploits, lacked the energetic determination to crown his labors. Perhaps he waited a revolution inside to throw open the gates, perhaps he had some reverence to use ill with armed hand his native city, which already proclaimed him, officially, a traitor and parricide, perhaps he fear d to summon his troops and thus deprive them of retreat in case of reverse, perhaps he disliked abandoning his position. Lucas Moreno decided at once to throw himself into the town, perhaps he hoped to make advantageous terms, like another Hermes, by going over to the Senate with the sight of his rude legionaries.

The favorable moment was, however, lost: a revolt in the city recoiled his designs, Moreno's army did not pass over to his crimson flag and delay gone rated on unwarlike feeling of discouragement, when the wind spread like wildfire that the Oriental Camillus came to throw his sword in the balance, and relieve the capital. Attorney, the filibuster, now prepared for a hasty flight, and Don Aparicio (who was said to be dead) coming up with 300 rustic cavalry, raised the siege. This was Medina's vanguard, and the main body of over 3000 men was close at hand. Now, if Moreno had a good cavalry regiment, he might have cut up the discomfited rebels, and seized the demagogue; but this Oriental campaign has been a series of blunders, and Flores was lucky enough to find his adversary even less capable than himself to profit of an advantage. Thus he was permitted to retire in good order towards Minas, in the face of a very superior enemy. But this retreat will be more fatal than even a defeat, and the opportunity is lost will never again present itself. The filibusters may prowl about the camp for a long time, but Montevideo will not have the pleasure of a second visit from the Crusaders. The National Guards have been released from duty at the barricading, and the theatres are re-opened. Medina, and Moreno holds wassail at Les Piedras, and we expect no end of congratulatory dispatches, proclamations, victorious pœans, &c.

PARLIAMENTARY RECORD

Yesterday there was very little amusement. As soon as the senators had taken the ir seats, they at once proceeded to business.

Sor. Collon moved that the project granting $10,000 pesos to the widow and children of Lavalle be discussed at once and not rent to committee.

- Sor Correa declared that he did not just think it proper or delicate of him to vote.

The project was suspended, owing to the number in the house being insufficient

The pension to the widow of Abernathin was next taken up, and moved by Sor. Cullen. As there was no opposition, it was, of course, passed.

Then came the Deputies.

Apparently in good humour, these legislators took their seats. The weather was fine, the city gay, and the news of the Chucho suing for peace confirmed. There was cause for good humour. Suddenly, however, a cloud came over the house. The Minister of Education had sent word that he could not attend, as he felt very unwell. Some of the deputies expressed the deepest concern for Dr. Cesin's health, and suggested that probably he had caught cold from sleeping in his new house before it was finished.

The Budget was then up resuming Wyse and Martin. Our friends Messrs Gelly and Obes were immediately sent for.

An impatient deputy wanted to know if Medina was going to fight well by doing until the Minister arrived.

The Chairman stated that there was no little effair in the way of business being neglected, namely the telegraph project between Rosario and Buenos Ayres.

Sor. Bel ya, who moved the project, explained the reasons why Sor. Rojo opposed it. The project was approved of in general, and would have been discussed in detail, but for the absent some of the members, fearing the clanking of spurs and arms, supposed that the Minister of War had arrived if the telegraph project was, therefore, laid aside, and it stopped the Minister.

Sor. Cerro proposed that this part of the Budget be suspended until next year.

The Minister inquired what he was to do in the mean time? Argentine soldiers were not like the Frenchmen's horse.

Sor. Orofio's motion was put and rejected.

The war budget was then taken up, and a long discuss on ensued, as to the salaries of colonels and sub-secretaries. Sor. Cerro wanted the whole affair as simply monstrous.

Sors. Manuel, Alsina, and Montes de Oca consulted with Sor. Castro.

The discussion grew warm. The Minister present was not an antiquated lawyer, but a hearty veteran. The members did not seem inclined for any disputes, and the Minister's patience lasted two and called for one would be the result. Things went on smoothly, however.

After a ten ne discussion, it was voted that the Minister's clerks should not be get angry any military tabs, and that they should wear same sabres as other ministers' clerks.

The house then adjourned.

THE GERMAN CONCERT.

The most ad entertainment of the Club "Teutonia" came off on Wednesday evening, before a select audience of 400 ladies and gentlemen, mostly German or English. Every available seat of the spacious saloon was occupied and a temporary stage was erected under the trophy of German banners. At the head of the room sat eight of the fairest galaxy of beauty had assembled, and the stewards, among whom we noticed the popular Mr. Rosner, were very attentive in procuring seats for the ladies.

At 8.30 the performances co nmenced with Mozart's overture of "Figaro" on the piano forte, after which the "Tra veller's song" (Wanderlied) was very creditably rendered by the whole body, numbering thirty-three voices, under the judicious management of Mr. Weber, the leader of the Germania Central. Mr. Rinklin, the talented music teacher, sang an aria from Bourbonnyttes with great taste and sweetness. The "Vespers of Palermo" and "Swedenborg" (Schwedische) brought into full play the power and training of the chorus, which, although it was seldom we can enjoyed the latter especially were both loudly applauded, as the martial air and enthusiastic flow of the performers augur well for the integrity of the Zollverein.

Mr. Rinklin solo on the violin was universally admired: it seems this gentleman is to himself quite a fortune to be Mozartus as he plays seems quite easy. The quartette Ständchen was very good, but not equal to the Polka herland, so eloquently rendered by the full choir, and breathing harmonious swells of the bel ye l and distant sound of revelry.

The second part began with "Die Hirtenwelt, which in German signifies "Home," and the very yellow of the soul's ballad strongly resembled our own English song of similar name. Mr Cardus very played some charming pieces on the pianoforte, the manipulation of which was so perfect that he was greeted with a loud encore. His Polka was indeed very pretty. The Syrian Nati nal Hymn was inferior to some of the evening's performances, and we could not whether to give the premium to the composer or the vocalists.

A delightful finale to Beethoven's Schwärmerei, and well known as every part of Europe: suffice it to say, that Mr. Rinklin did it complete justice, and Mr. Cardus's accompaniment on the pianoforte was all that could be desired. But "Blumer Montag" was the chef d'œuvre, in which the accuracy of the time, the graceful alterations and shrill refrain, alike amused the audience and showed the high musical training of the members: it was encored. Something quite new to Here pleasing Schiller's lute," wound up the entertainment, at the close of which repeated calls for "Vivat" and loud acclamations, showed that the audience was well pleased, and fully appreciated the talent of the amateurs.

We were sorry to notice several members of the Glee Club, who expressed, in unmeasured terms, their admiration of the German vivals. The community is, Mr. Weniken was the Julius of the evening, directing the choir with wonderful precision. Perhaps we cannot close our remarks more fitly to our friends of the Teutonia, than assuring them that we are so unfortunate as not to understand a word of German, but we speak from experience on an evening, and we hope soon to be invited to a second concert, for the less learn the first time the institution of the Case (1661).

EDITORIAL TABLES.

A meeting is to be held at Fernandez' barroon, Tres Esquinas, next Sunday, at three o'clock p.m., for the adoption of measures to erect a new church in Barracas al Norte, as the present chapel of Sta. Lucia is found too small for the congregation.

We read in the "Reforma" that Baron Mua has been elected to represent the province of Rio Grande in the Brazilian Chambers. The noble banker enjoys great popularity in his native country, where his name is identified with most of the national enterprises, by which reason, moreover, it was that Don Pedro raised him to the dignity of Peer of the Empire.

Baron Duanesi is at present on a visit to Buenos Ayres. He was entrusted by the King of the Belgians to be envoy to Brazil the announcement of his decision as arbiter in the question with England. He received a despatch from the court of Rio Janeyro, and will return to Brussels next month.

Doctors differ: the "Reforma" calls Sandes an assassin; our colleagues exonerate him as a saint. The other newspapers are divided whether to give the premium to the composer or the vocalists.

- Archilles' is one of Beethoven's favourites

FLORES NEAR COLONIA.

The Cauquena brought news last evening that the diligence of the 16th was stopped and the mail robbed by the rebels near San Jose. The Mexpa had brought news yesterday that they were in Rosario (!O) when he passed the main-body retiring before Aconcio. The whole rebel force said to be 4000, but probably their number is larger. The Government is enrolling actively, and the enemy robbing horses everywhere. The latter are moving inward Colonia, as if intending to embark, and clear out.

FROM THE WEST INDIES.

EXTENSIVE CONFLAGRATION AT HAVANA, LOSS BETWEEN FOUR AND FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

The steamer "Roanoke," from Havana on July 29, arrived yesterday. Through Turner Maltby we learn that just as the steamer was about to leave the bay of Havanna a great smoke was seen in the direction of Regla, evidently proceeding from an extensive conflagration. Barges, boats, and steamers were soon crowding from the city, loaded with troops and men. As the "Roanoke" got under way a clear view was obtained of the burning scene. The fire had taken in the immense Almacenes or warehouses, of Messrs. Fesser, situated on the Reglas wharf. This immense range of warehouses consists of eight big buildings, divided midway by a street and the Station house of the Reglas and Marianoora railroad. The fire had commenced in the fifth building of the row, and under the influence of the strong breeze had already rapidly consumed sixteen buildings, and there was every no prospect of arresting the progress of the flames before they reached the street and the railroad station. If the railroad depot should burn, there could possibly stop the fire until all the remaining warehouses to the west were destroyed. From passengers on the "Roanoke" who were well informed with the locality and the contents of the warehouses already destroyed it is estimated they range to the amount over 8 ,000,000 was named. The fire is said to be no insurance on the buildings or contents.

ON 'CHANGE.

Sept. 24.

It was past midday before an ounce was sold. Things could not be duller than they are at present on the Bolsa. People talk only of politics because there is nothing else to speak about. No wool, and scarcely any produce of any description, pulitics is all that is left us, and of these the market is well supplied.

It was said on the Bolsa that the foreign Powers had at last interfered in the Oriental question. Brazil had offered men, money, and arms, and Paraguay is about to send four steamers to keep the mouth of the River Plate in order. Merchants express the greatest satisfaction at this, as peace we want, and peace we must have.

One of the most significant signs of the times is the great demand for cotton seed by the brokers. We are most happy to be able to support this, and hope that in the peaceful pursuit of cotton planting they will reap splendid sterling advantages than in the fluctuations of paper money.

Ounces opened at half-past twelve o'clock at 43⅞, and kept steady all day, closing firm at that price.

A good many bills of exchange were taken on England to-day, at 60⅜ and 60⅝. Od. The principal takers were German houses. Government has taken £25,000 through an American house.
